1.0 INTRODUCTION

1.1 This Specific Program Agreement is developed as a revised addendum to the General Agreement between Fundación Universidad de las Américas Puebla (UDLAP) and Appalachian State University (Appalachian) signed by both 06/02/2010. The aim of this Agreement is to complement the General Agreement and facilitate the implementation of the Dual Degree Program in Communication (that henceforth shall be known as “the program”) between the aforementioned institutions in order to award participating students both the Bachelor’s Diploma in Communication (study programs: Communication, Communication and Media Production or Communication and Image) granted by the UDLAP and one of the following: the Bachelor of Science Degree in Communication Studies or the Bachelor of Science Degree in Communication (with one of four majors: Advertising, Electronic Media/Broadcasting, Journalism, or Public Relations) granted by Appalachian. This dual degree program will provide mutual benefits to both parties and will help Appalachian and the UDLAP achieve their institutional objectives.

1.2 In order to be competitive in the global marketplace, while at the same time developing tolerance and respect for diversity, students at both institutions should strive to be true “global citizens” and be equipped to compete in their chosen fields of study. The acquisition of a second or third language is currently of utmost importance, as well as the ability to adapt to processes and procedures that vary from culture to culture.

1.3 With this philosophy in mind, the aforementioned institutions are enhancing the traditional educational structure and are adopting the structure of a dual degree program. The advantages that students from both institutions will gain are incalculable. These students will graduate from two universities, having an opportunity to look for jobs in both countries or elsewhere and successfully competing with their peers in the same fields of study with only one diploma.

2.0 MISSION

The mission of the dual program is to provide undergraduate education in two-country and two-university environments in order to graduate future communication leaders.

3.0 OBJECTIVES

3.1 To provide undergraduate studies for students who wish to develop a professional career in the fields of advertising, broadcasting and media production, communication studies, journalism, or public relations.
3.2 To strengthen and deepen the relationship between UDLAP and Appalachian, a dual degree program will provide the institutions with a program created in the spirit of mutual cooperation and benefits between the two institutions.

4.0 GENERAL CLAUSES

4.1 Admission to the program will require approval from both universities.

4.2 On signing this Agreement, both institutions agree to receive up to five (5) students per year as participants in the dual degree program. Although a one-to-one exchange is desirable, a deviation from this will not be considered an impediment.

4.3 If in any given year one of the institutions is unable to send the number of students equivalent to the number received, it is stipulated that during the period in which the Agreement is in force a balance shall be sought so that, overall, an equivalent number of students participate in the program at both institutions. Any imbalance in the number of students exchanged between both institutions within an academic year will be compensated within another academic year. A review of balances will be conducted every five years.

4.4 The balance of exchanges in the dual degree program in communication will be considered as separate from the regular exchange balance between Appalachian and UDLAP.

4.5 The exchange students will have the same privileges, responsibilities and obligations of regular students and are equally subject to the rules and regulations of the Host Institution.
